Contents

Editorial: Maritime Security Balance is Changing
Stefan Nitschke

Letters

Letter from Washington
Otto Kreller

Letter from London
Tim Mahon

Letter from Warsaw
Robert Czulda

Power Adjustment
Stefan Nitschke

Technology Spotlight

Crowsnest ASaC: Royal Navy Merlins Take on New Surveillance Capability
Alan Warnes

Features

Surface & Subsurface
Getting Value: Navies Continuing to Increase Frigate and Corvette Numbers
Stefan Nitschke

Strong Mix: Naval Warfare Relies on Torpedo Weapons and Torpedo Countermeasures
Stefan Nitschke

Naval Aviation

Aircraft Carrier Cooperation: US, UK Navies Build Collaborative Presence in North Atlantic
Dr Lee Willett

Electronic Warfare

Electronic Protection is Just the Start
Dr Thomas Withington

Countermeasures

The Last 3,000 Yards: Amphibious Assault, Explosive Ordnance Disposal and Mine Countermeasures
Massimo Annati

Underwater Explosive Ordnance Disposal: Evolving Threats Creating New Vehicles, Sensors
Massimo Annati

Special Operations

Maritime Special Operations Forces in the Land Combat Environment
Andrew White

Training & Simulation

New Simulators Provide Realism for Training, Experimentation
Edward Lundquist

Logistics & MRO

Subsea Connections: Hydro Group Examines Situation, Evolution and Solutions
Tim Mahon

Regional Focus

Silent Sea: Polish Naval Industry Hopes to Expand Horizons
Tomasz Grotnik

Ukrainian Combat Boat Essentials: Gyurza-M and Kentavr-LK
Tomasz Grotnik

Canada’s Naval Mission in Europe Supports NATO and its Allies
Dr Joetey Attariwala

Special Ship

HTMS Bhumibol Adulyadej: Royal Thai Navy’s Latest Frigate Takes to the Seas
Guy Toremans

On the cover:

Israel’s Navy gets new corvette-size surface combatants aimed at extending its naval operational capabilities. The new class of surface combatants presently being constructed in Germany will add to the capability of the current SA’AR 5 type (Elbit class) missile corvettes patrolling Israel’s coastal and EEZ waters. Deliveries of the four SAAR 6 corvettes are expected to be completed in 2022.

(Photo: thyssenkrupp Marine Systems)