Corvette-sized warships are acknowledged to be vital enablers of today’s and tomorrow’s naval powers. Smaller naval fleets in particular require them, in addition to other types of surface combatants – to control their maritime territory, and for deterrence. The next ten to 15 years are expected to see massive changes in the procurement of newer generation corvettes in nearly all regions in the world.

Naval Forces reviews demands and programmes in Asia and the North Africa and Middle East (MENA) region.

(Photo: Fincantieri)